Members of Congress have formed at least 286 caucuses to represent their own priorities or the interests of constituents or businesses. Many caucuses have registered with the House Administration Committee, as required by House rules. Others, including some that include only senators as members, have not registered. (Story, p. 2334)

What follows is a compilation of caucuses, developed from several sources: the official list of registered groups, a list published in the Congressional Staff Directory by CQ Press and entries on the Web sites of House members and senators. Where possible, the members who chair these caucuses and aides who are listed as contacts are included.
