

Where the Plants Are — and Could Be

Nuclear power companies and consortia have their sights set on 16 possible locations for next-generation reactors — virtually all of them next to existing nuclear plants. The industry currently operates 103 commercial plants in 31 states that collectively generate about 19 percent of the electricity in the country.

SOURCES: Nuclear Regulatory Commission, Nuclear Energy Institute